Anchorage to Homer Driving Map

Share 239

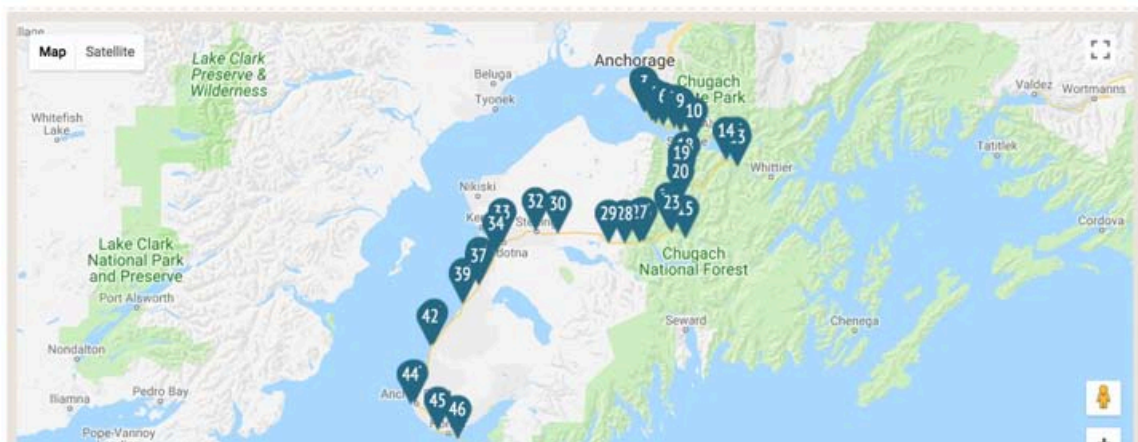

Driving non-stop from Anchorage to Homer would take a good 4.5-5 hours. However, you'll find plenty of reasons to pull over on the drive south: Wildlife often appears along the roadside. Pullouts offer photo opportunities of whales, waves, and volcanoes. Trailheads lead to fabulous alpine and ocean views. Restaurants offer lunch breaks beyond the usual fast-food fare. Enjoying all the scenery and activities along the way could easily stretch this trip into a daylong adventure. For those traveling by RV, here is our list of campgrounds on the Kenai Peninsula.

Explore History En Route

The Kenai Mountains-Turnagain Arm National Heritage Area is a vibrant corridor of natural, cultural, and historic riches, and many sites are accessible as you travel from Anchorage to Homer. This dynamic area runs from the "Gateway City" of Seward north to Indian, and spans Whittier's Prince William Sound port on the east to Cooper Landing on the west.

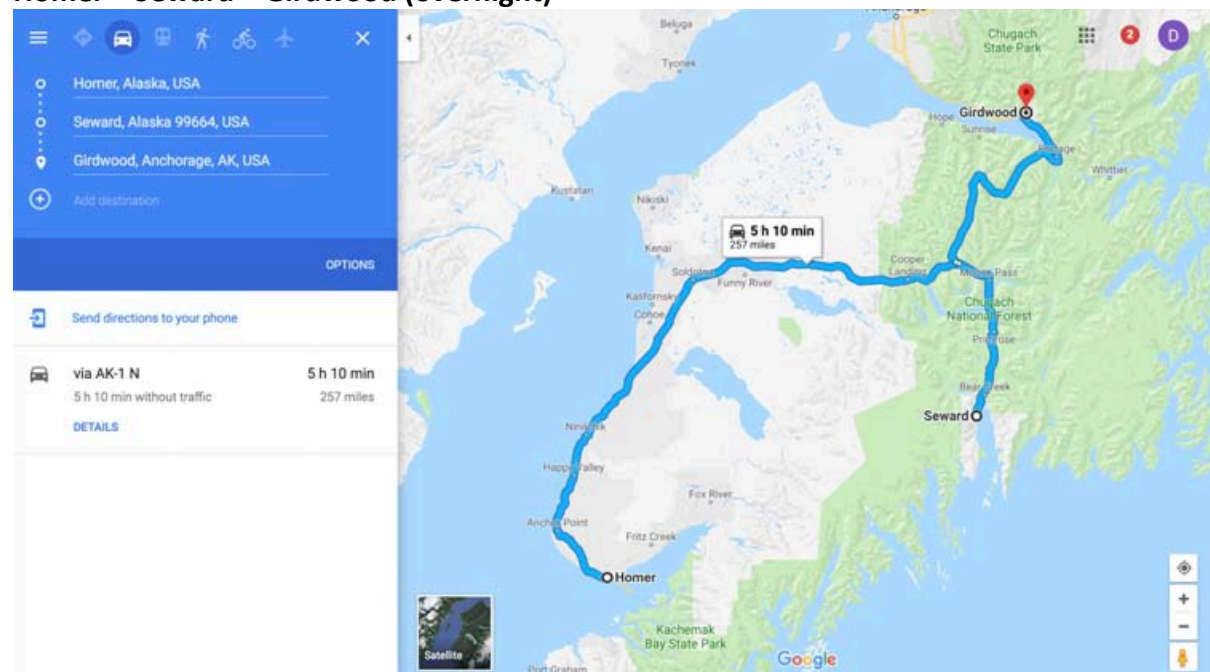

Although travelers can now drive to all of these communities within a few hours, early roads were often seasonal. Pack and dog team trails were a bargain to build at $100 per mile to construct and winter sled roads ran $250 per mile. Year-round wagon roads cost $2,200 a mile, but the ride through boggy areas wasn't paved in gold. Large logs, infilled with gravel, were the roadbed in these low spots. Such "corduroy" roads were passable by horse team in the early 1900s.

Within these still-rugged miles is hidden a treasure trove of stories. From Native peoples to Russian fur traders, European explorers, and American gold prospectors, the quest for trade and treasures tested the limits of human endurance and inspired remarkable ingenuity. Discover the story as you explore the KMTA National Heritage Area.
